Facing Doubt: A Book For Adventist Believers 'On The Margins'

Synopsis

On the surface it may appear that I am quite negative about many things in my church and that I am pessimistic about the church's future. That would, however, be a wrong conclusion. I am not about to give up on my church but I try to take the long view. I believe current clouds can blow away and eventually new winds can begin to blow. The last thing I would want to do is discourage any readers by my analysis of the crisis in Christianity in general, and in Adventism in particular. I would be devastated if my book drove people away from faith and away from their church. On the contrary, I hope with all my heart that it will help at least some readers to take a new leap of faith and then (re)-connect with their church. I have written this book because I deeply care for all those who have ended up on the margins. I do not have the illusion that reading it will make all doubts disappear. I do hope and pray, however, that it will help those who read it to establish priorities in their faith experience and in their ties with the church, and dare to live creatively with their uncertainties and doubts.

The author lays out current issues within the SDA Church with clarity and then gives some personal answers and hopes for the future. Whether those answers are sufficient is an individual decision. It is a breath of fresh air to hear a honest and heart felt assessment of the direction(s) the SDA denomination may go and why.

This is a good book, but as I have already told the author it has not gone far enough to address the central issues.

I found it helpful and spiritual will study the book some more

One of the best books I have ever read!

A great book for anyone who is SDA and has questions and doubts about their church and belief system. This book covers most issues that you may have.

This is book for Adventist Church. Reinder Bruinsma is balanced theologian, very good writer.

Just reality, no "halleluia" message - something earnestly to be considered

Studying this in our sabbath class.
