Karl Samson and Jane Aukshunas, husband-and-wife travel-writing team, find that the sunny winter skies of the Arizona desert are the perfect antidote to the dreary winters of their Pacific Northwest home. Each winter, they flee the rain to explore Arizona's deserts, mountains, cities, and small towns. It is the state's unique regional style, Native American cultures, abundance of contemporary art, and, of course, boundless landscapes that keep the duo fascinated by Arizona. Summers find the team researching their other books, including Frommer's Washington, Frommer's Oregon, and Frommer's Seattle & Portland.

The book was described on with the following comment "Get the latest on hotels, restaurants, sightseeing, sports, shopping, and nightlife" - however I discovered when it arrived that it is the 2003 edition. When I went back to to check, I did spot it mentioned, but not in an obvious place. I think the comment is misleading and it should be noted more prominently. As I live overseas, I paid for this to be forwarded on to my address. It is not worth the cost of returning it - otherwise I would. Very disappointing.

Dated material. obsolete.
