Shomit Mitter is a freelance writer. Maria Shevtsova is Professor of Drama and Theatre Arts at the Department of Drama, Goldsmiths College

I had to get this book for my theatre directing class. Its a great book to get the essential points and facts on the directors that created what we know as the "director". Each person has about 3-5 pages worth of information of their life and what they contribute to the theatre. The writing is interesting with little fun filled facts and is a good book for those who want to get an idea who the person is without having to go to deep. Great reference book. Great for cocktail parties with important theatre people.

It give you a good at a glance idea of 50 directors in one book. It is a great beginning in discussion of the world of directing.
