Rambles In Cork City And County (New Irish Walks & Scrambles S)

Synopsis

Cork, the largest county and the second largest city in Ireland, is blessed with some of the finest rural and urban walking areas. This book covers over thirty walks of short or medium distance that are accessible to young and old, fit and unfit. Take in an expansive vista from the north side of the city, enjoy the solitude of the Musheragh Hills with their wealth of Stone Age remains, or check out the flora and fauna of the riverside. All walks not within the city, are within twenty-five miles of it.

Customer Reviews

There is some history and helpful directions here, but a book of rambles needs better maps, pictures, and more color. Using it to plan my time in Cork, I found the actual experience to be unlike what this brief book led me to expect. The book is drab. Cork is a small, bright green delight. Getting to Cork is part of the problem. Routes often include Shannon and Dublin, or London. My recommendation: Fly to Shannon, take the train from Limerick Station, and enjoy a local bed and breakfast and not one of the "luxury" hotels. Walk. Shop. Eat. Enjoy. Ramble. Visit the lovely University College Cork. This city typifies an American's bright stereotype of the Emerald Isle, yet Cork is also a working city. It overflows with history, greets you with charm, and induces a smile even on the world traveler.
