I sat down this morning to read a couple of chapters of Grace Trail by Anne Barry Jolles and ended up reading it from beginning to end in one sitting. Needless to say, this gem of a read and roadmap for personal fulfillment really grabbed me. I thoroughly enjoyed and engaged with what Anne has put forth here as her vision for making the best life possible though the simple (not easy) but powerful grace trail process. Seeing grace as an unexpected gift requiring no repayment reminds me of the times when I have seen and embraced its presence in my own life. I so appreciate the reminder. Even more so I appreciate the opportunity to use the process so beautifully written to sort out the challenges that life presents. This is a great read and even better guide. Bravo! I have a fast paced life and this process allows me to quickly move thru my daily stressors. Some days I run through the GRATITUDE, RELEASE, ACCEPT, CHALLENGE, AND EMBRACE process just once and other days I use this process whenever life overwhelms me. I can use the GRACE PROCESS and spend as little as one to twenty minutes working through it, or I can use the process as I journal at the end of my day. Anne's ideas are insightful and fun to read! Reading her book certainly gets one's creative juices flowing. I just love how this quick process has helped me to work through my daily challenges and simplify my life. My 10 yr old granddaughter writing inspirational messages on rocks while on live video showing her friends what she is doing.

This book was a fast read for me but made a huge impact. When I feel anxious I am able to calm my self using the tools that Anne has given us through the Grace Trail. It was well written with many stories about Anne that made me feel like she was hanging out with me telling them. I highly recommend The Grace Trail to fellow readers.
